

D. Dinis

Rubrica

I know a man, O beloved so fair, whose death is near at hand, your hand;
open your eyes so as to remember
me, dear lady.

I know a man whose fate is decided,
whose death is doubtless close by;
open your eyes and recall to mind
me, dear lady.

I know a man – hear me yet! – whose death, from love, only you can prevent;
open your eyes so as not to forget
me, dear lady.

cantigas-stag.square-bit.com

© 04/02/2026