

D. Dinis

Rubrica

The Provençal poets sing well, and they say they do it with love, but poets who do their singing only in the time of flowers don't know the pain my heart endures because of my lady.

I know they know how to praise the ladies they love in song, and how ardently they sing!
But those who sing only in spring know not, may God forgive me, the pain I'm always feeling.

Those who rejoice and make poems when the flower is full with color and, once the season is over, forget their calling as poets, don't know the hell I am living, this love that keeps on killing.

cantigas-stag.square-bit.com

© 04/02/2026