Rubrica

In my travels, I have gone where loyalty and reason, courage and wisdom, amount to nothing, and where a man gains by lavish praise alone – here, the talk must be sweet, even when a lord's sown salt.

Whoever, like me, values honesty, and knows right from wrong – he'll turn away, but won't be spurned like others (I won't say who or how).
Elsewhere I've known men who'd not lie, or lose honor.

In this place I dreamed a single theme: I saw a hoopoe catch an egret, and I saw the hoopoe's crest – What does the egret mean?
and how'd the hoopoe best it?
