

D. Dinis

Rubrica

Mr. So-and-so, the other evening, talked so much I thought he'd keep me up all night, till finally he said,
"I'm going home, it's time for bed," and I said, "I wish you all the best,
because you're leaving me at last."

I got so sick of having to listen to him go on – God be my witness – I couldn't keep my eyelids open, and when he said, "I'm going home,"
then I said, "I wish you all the best,
because you're leaving me at last."

He chattered on for the longest time, until he had bored me out of my mind,
without caring if I found him interesting.
And when he said, "I'm turning in,"
then I said, "I wish you all the best,
because you're leaving me at last."

cantigas-stag.square-bit.com

© 14/12/2025